Dear Enterprise Contracting,

Deciding we were never going to move, we needed to redo our woefully outdated kitchen. We were rookies in the kitchen makeover arena and need professional help to guide us as well as do the actual work involved. After considering other possible contractors we were pleased to work with Enterprise Contracting. Our basic instruction to Enterprise - 'Don't let us do something dumb'. Our Enterprise project manager was Adze Brown who knows his stuff, is the soul of patience when working with folks who change their minds, and who did not let us do dumb things. He oversaw the efforts of various sub-contractors - carpenters, electricians, plumbers, painters, tile, flooring, and HVAC people who were all truly professional and who went the extra mile to please us. They took pride in their work, and it shows. We always felt like we were in good hands. Adze had to overcome a couple of problems with his suppliers, but when an instance like that arose, he without fail came straight to us, explained the situation, and took care of it.

We discovered early on that we had a topknotch bunch of people working on our kitchen, and thus we requested that Adze take on a number of new tasks in our house. All of these were done in parallel with the work on the kitchen and were completed with the same professionalism that was true with the kitchen makeover. In at least one case, Adze was able to do what seemed to me to be the impossible. There didn't seem to be anything that the Enterprise people could not do.

Enterprise Contracting is a straight shooting outfit that does what it says it will do. We never had a problem with anything that we all signed up for. Adze Brown represented Enterprise in the best possible way, was a pleasure to work, and made the whole effort as painless as possible. We never had a single hassle. We are most happy with our kitchen and pleased as well with the additional tasks that Enterprise completed for us. We would recommend Enterprise Contracting to anyone planning to remodel their home in any major or minor way.
